

INTERNATIONAL COLLABORATIVE PROJECT - 'MY HERITAGE CITY'

“Alone we can do so little; together we can do so much”

— Helen Keller

Modern technology has often been held responsible for the loss of warm relationships causing a decline in the exchange of culture and tradition. We at ADIS, value culture and tradition and motivate the future generation to share ideas and thoughts to enrich their knowledge. To inculcate the values of sharing and caring and to trigger an interest in students to know more about the heritage of their nation, the grade 7 students had been given an opportunity to be a part of the collaborative project with Cygnus World School, Vadodara, India.

The international collaborative project, 'My Heritage City' gave the students an opportunity to learn more about the country they live in, and some of the prominent monuments of their homeland. Both the schools exchanged travel brochures and power point presentations prepared by their students to showcase the rich heritage of their land and to attract visitors to their treasured monuments. There was vibrancy in the air when the young and smart future citizens from both the countries exchanged their views and thoughts in a video conference. It was a fruitful activity that our students got to know each other and established a healthy relationship with their peers in India. Moreover it proved to be an effective illustration of the numerous possibilities of the use of modern technology in the context of education.
